

Guidance notes for completing the US version of the Russian Visa application form

- The application can be typed or handwritten.
- Once printed, the form should show a box (border) around the edges of the words. The distance between the border and the edge of the paper must not be larger than 7mm.
- The application must be printed on one single page (front and back) and the border lines must line up when the application is held up to a light source. All of the above instructions must be followed or the Consulate will reject the application.
- Provide 1 fully completed and signed copy of the application form(s).
- The name of the traveler on the application form must match how the name is written in the passport.
- All fields on the form must be filled out.
